Activation of the cyclic AMP-dependent protein kinase from tobacco BY-2 cells by cAMP: interaction with the cytoplasmic inhibitor. The in vitro interaction between cAMP-dependent protein kinase and its cytoplasmic inhibitor has been investigated. It was found that cAMP-dependent protein kinase from tobacco BY-2 cells and its inhibitor interact with 50% of the initial binding sites at molar ratios of 100:1 and 3:1, respectively. Syria says Syria hosted 3,000 Chinese for the Beijing Olympics, along with tens of thousands of Tunisians, Iraqis and Egyptians. Syria has received several foreign delegations to view preparations for the Beijing Olympics, which have taken place virtually under the radar since the outbreak of the Syrian unrest. A delegation of 25 Tunisians and two Tunisian journalists, including a cameraman, were shown around the Great

Hardware compatibility and.1. Field of the Invention The invention pertains to microstructures such as can be used in shallow depth integrated circuits, e.g., having a polysilicon region that is recessed by a certain depth from the surrounding silicon surface. 2. Description of the Prior Art Integrated circuits are now being built in shallow depth devices. For example, one semiconductor substrate can have the transistor region recessed by only one micron to one and a half microns from the remaining substrate surface, while having the field oxide region that is surrounded by the transistor region substantially in contact with the substrate surface. U.S. Pat. No. 4,818,665 issued Apr. 4, 1989 to Michael Hsiao and assigned to the assignee of the present invention describes various processes for fabricating these shallow depth devices. It is known in the prior art to use polysilicon regions to carry various signals and voltages into and out of the semiconductor devices that are formed in the substrate. This polysilicon is typically provided on a shallow depth silicon substrate and the polysilicon defines the transistors that are formed on the shallow depth substrate. Other regions of the shallow depth device, for example gate oxide regions, may be formed with regions of a thick layer of silicon oxide (SiO.sub.2), or they may be a thin polysilicon layer with the
