Let G be a simple undirected graph. Suppose that for all u and v we have $d(u,v) \leq \lfloor \frac{|N(u)| + |N(v)|}{2} \rfloor$. Prove that G is a tournament graph. (A tournament graph is a graph such that if we choose any two vertices, one of them has a strictly smaller distance to the other one than the distance in the other case.) A: I might have some of the details wrong, but I will give it a try. Observe that $d(u,v) = \lfloor \frac{|N(u)| + |N(v)|}{2} \rfloor$.

But it isn't hard to find older versions of Outlook - I found an Familial cases of schizophrenia with biochemical abnormalities with abnormal erythrocyte phosphoinositides. A number of studies have shown an increase in membrane phosphoinositide metabolism in schizophrenia, but not all of these studies have shown an increase in the putative second messenger, inositol 1,4,5-trisphosphate. A study of membrane phosphoinositides in two families with a high prevalence of schizophrenia is reported. In the first family, there were 6 schizophrenic members and no unaffected relatives. The second family had 5 schizophrenics and 1 unaffected relative. There were no significant differences between the four schizophrenics and the unaffected relative. However, one of the five schizophrenics had a significant increase in the concentration of inositol 1,4,5-trisphosphate. One control family was compared with a case-control study, and no differences were found.
